The landscapes are constantly changing. The changes are more dynamic and intense in the cities and in the areas close to them. The larger an urban area, the greater the possibility that its environment will change. The case of the metropolitan area of Valencia is an example of this transforming potential. In the area of influence of the city of Valencia there have been changes produced by the outsourcing of activities typical of the functions of a city. Although others are in reality a consequence of the consumption of the rural world by the urban population. Both types of transformations are reflected in the alteration of the purely agrarian and natural landscape that existed previously. In it, strange elements are inserted over time, such as industrial zones, patches of residential housing of different types, location of sports and leisure areas, etc. That is to say, they are landscapes that we have around the house and that in many occasions; we do not appreciate their transformations with enough clarity. The proposed itinerary, located in the municipality of Náquera, focuses on the identification of those landscapes that surround us. Of low difficulty, along its route we will have the opportunity to recognize the mix between the traditional landscapes, existing previously, such as traditional agricultural and natural, and those over imposed recently, in which it can be recognized the different phases of urbanization, the location of industrial estates and the planning of future constructions at the expense of existing landscapes.
